

The art in my collection started as masks made from palm tree husks and has continued to evolve into many different forms. Benefiting from years of watercolor classes has taught me ways of using composition and color. I have carried these teachings in my art including mixed media and sculpture. I am always striving to use repurposed items in the majority of my work. To keep growing and creating interesting art, I try to push myself by incorporating new techniques and lots of experimenting. Using my imagination I hope to create pieces to catch the viewers attention and put a smile on their face.
